States Senate, the canvass for members of the Legislature was made among the Democrats on the issue of his candidacy. The faction opposed to Mr. Camden, headed by Daniel B. Lucas, fought hard to prevent him from obtaining a majority of Democratic members of the Legislature favorable to him. The contest was very bitter and in some sections of the State there were ructions that endangered the success of the party. Mr. Camden was successful in obtaining a majority and when the Legislature methad enough friends to give him the caucus nomination for Senator. Then

Lightning struck the cathedral of the caucus nomination for Senator. Then came the memorable "kick." Lucas was a member of the Legislature. He was also a candidate for the United States Senate. There were eleven anti-States Senate. There were eleven anti-Camden Democrats who were for anybody to beat Camden. Some refused to go in the caucus, and others bolted it after the nomination was made. James M. Mason organized the "kickers" and Lucas led them, and the famous deadlock of that session began.
